The competition was much better supported by secondary teams this year : nearly equal to the primary numbers. Competition was close (with the exception of one who was photographed chatting on her mobile as she dawdled around her course!) These increased numbers are largely due to a few teachers who give hours in introducing students to this "life-long sport". We still go on hoping that some will move from orienteering in school hours only to seeking a place in a schools' team with the support of their families.
